REGISTRATION SET FOR U. LOWELL CONTINUING EDUCATION

LOWELL, MASS. - Fitness and Nutrition, Basic Electronics, The History of Lowell, The Short Story, Money and Banking, and Issues in Police Administration are among courses offered at the University of Lowell in the spring term of Continuing Education. Registration for undergraduate credit courses, taught in the evenings, is January 8-11, from 6:30 PM - 8:00 PM, in room 214 at Ball Engineering Center.

Registration for Graduate courses is scheduled for January 10 and 11, from 6:30 - 8:00 PM in room 208, also at the Ball Engineering Center.

Continuing Education programs at the University of Lowell are held each fall, spring, and summer semester and brochures are available by calling the campus at 452-5000. The fourth community service program of general interest non-credit programs will have registration in February.

Over 4000 people were enrolled in campus continuing education programs last year. The University division also offers special seminars for professional development.
